Going to the Fields

Once upon a time, Vietnamese farmers have lived in closebond with nature.

People learned to observe nature, make use of what was at hand, and work together to cultivate a bountiful harvest.

Oh, whoever you are, remember this:
Three rounds of silkworms, three years of ploughing.
By Heaven's grace, a bountiful harvest:*
Plant rice, rice grows strong;
Raise silkworms, silkworms thrive.
Win or lose, though it may lie with Heaven,
When you see the great waves rise,
Do not let go of the oar.

- Vietnamese folk poetry

*"Trời (Ông Trời): "Heaven" or "Sky" in Vietnamese folk belief, often personified as a higher power..

Joining the Festival

Days of hard labor for a bountiful harvest are followed by festivals:

Ceremonies such as new rice offerings and harvest celebrations, with prayers for favorable weather and abundant crops, are also occasions for the community to eat, play, share, and preserve its traditions.

Wandering the Garden

The “Chạm Mùa” workshop was born as a bridge as a bridge that brings us closer.

You are invited to visit, experience and touch the moments of the harvest season, to fully feel the sustainable values found in the simplest things.
